Professional Designations Marks Usage Guidelines

The College for Financial Planning®—a Kaplan Company is the owner of the following certification marks (marks) and their corresponding logos. U.S. trademark law sets forth specific rules on how trademarks must be used in order to protect their registered status with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. Having worked hard to obtain the privilege to use these marks, you will want to protect them and use them wisely. This guide provides you with some basic usage guidelines.

Certification Marks

The College's certification marks may only be used those individuals specifically authorized by the College. Use of the College's certification marks denote professionals who have successfully completed the requirements of the program and are currently complying with the Standards of Professional Conduct and ongoing renewal requirements. The marks should be used consistently and correctly to preserve their integrity and distinctiveness. As the owner of these marks, the College has the legal responsibility to ensure that they are protected and used only by those who have received written authorization from the College for Financial Planning to use them. The College reserves the authority both to grant and revoke the privilege of using these marks.

These marks may NOT be used in any of the following ways:

- As part of the name of a firm or firm logo. This also applies where one or more firm members are authorized to use the marks in association with their own names.
- As the name of an investment product or plan.
- As generic terms. This occurs when a mark is used to describe a product or service. Examples of generic uses are:
 - ♦ "Xeroxes" instead of "Xerox® copies"
 - ♦ "Kleenexes" instead of "Kleenex® tissues"
 - ♦ "Band-Aids" instead of "Band-Aids® brand bandages."
